

ABOUT CIB

CIB is the acronym of the abbreviated French (former) name: "Conseil International du Bâtiment" (in English this is: International Council for Building). In the course of 1998, the abbreviation has been kept but the full name changed into:

INTERNATIONAL COUNCIL FOR RESEARCH AND INNOVATION IN BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION

CIB was established in 1953 as an Association whose objectives were to stimulate and facilitate international cooperation and information exchange between governmental research institutes in the building and construction sector, with an emphasis on those institutes engaged in technical fields of research.

CIB has since developed into a world wide network of over 5000 experts from about 500 member organisations active in the research community, in industry or in education, who cooperate and exchange information in over 50 CIB Commissions covering all fields in building and construction related research and innovation.

ABOUT CIB W062

CIB W062 on Water Supply and Drainage for Buildings was established in 1971.

The Objectives of the Commission are:

- to report on research results, industrial developments and standardisation progress
- to stimulate concerted research actions between different research teams
- to coordinate the drafting of "states-of-the-art" for selected topics
- to draw up inventories of research and bibliographic lists

The Commission's Scope includes:

- Water supply systems and drinking water treatment (softening, heating etc.) inside buildings
- Water (waste and rainwater) drainage systems in buildings and individual waste water treatment

ABOUT NAGANO CITY

The city of Nagano is located in the center of the Japanese Archipelago. About the 388,000 inhabitants of the city live mainly in the Nagano Basin (Zenkoji Basin), an area surrounded by lush green mountains. Centered around the 1,400 year-old Zenkoji Temple - a National Treasure - Nagano has developed as a city which draws many pilgrims. In 1998, it hosted the XVIII Winter Olympics and Paralympics.
